

A Meeting of the Minds
Come Join Us!

Service providers, policymakers, community members and other interested stakeholders are invited to a preliminary discussion about protecting older adults in prison settings and avenues to bridge the gap between victim and offender services.

This event will be held on Friday, July 25th at the Fordham University Graduate School of Service during the National Organization of Forensic Social Work Conference. We will explore a life course systems and power perspective and the role of multilevel trauma and oppression and its relationship to abuse, health and well-being in later life (see Figure 1, which is included below).

This information will be used to craft solutions to ending violence across the life course and achieving safety, peace, and freedom for all ages.

Please email your interest in participating to btep@fordham.edu and we will provide updated details soon.

Figure 1

A Conceptual Model for a Life Course Power Analysis that Incorporates the Life Course Perspective, Ecological Systems, and Critical Theories that can be Applied to Tracking The Different Pathways of Older Adults in Prison and Areas for Prevention, Assessment, and Intervention

