

Elder Justice Internship Resources

These internships are available for undergraduate, law school and other graduate students. If you know of other internships or opportunities available to students please let us know!

The New York City Elder Abuse Center, Risk & Resiliency Internship Project offers undergraduates the opportunity to intern at the center during their summer break. RRIP is specifically designed to educate undergraduate students about the value of older adults as well as the different types of abuse that can occur later in life. The resiliency side of the program brings interns and older adults together through use of The Legacy Project's structured interview method. - See more at: <http://nyceac.com/internships-at-nyc-elder-abuse-center/#sthash.N2yCMTnS.dpuf>

The Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Center for Elder Abuse Prevention at the Hebrew Home at Riverdale offers internships through their National David Berg Center for Law and Aging Internship Program, which attracts law students from across the country. The comprehensive Weinberg Center provides emergency residential shelter as well as psychosocial, health care and legal advocacy and community-based services for victims of elder abuse. Interns are given practical opportunities to deepen their understanding of legal issues confronting the older adult population and do substantive research and writing on the different legal and policy issues impacting the older adult population and victims of elder abuse. Interns also have the opportunity to attend conferences and contribute to the Elder Abuse Awareness campaign. -See more at: <http://www.hebrewhome.org/weinbergcenter.asp>

The Senior Justice Program based at University of Arkansas at Little Rock addresses elder crime and policy issues that affect older adults. This work is carried out by undergraduate and graduate students conducting research, presenting at community seminars and scholarly conferences, serving on boards/commissions and operating of the Senior Justice Center hotline.- See more at: <http://ualr.edu/seniorjustice/>